

I do not believe that the FCC should limit the services provided by satellite radio. Services, such as satellite radio, requiring a fee are not in direct competition with free services provided by broadcast stations. My personal experience shows that I listen to both satellite and broadcast programming, using local broadcasting for news, events, and personalities.

Also, when traveling, I should not have to try every broadcast station on the dial to find the few that give traffic and weather every 15 minutes or so and probably do not give these updates during non-rush hours. Off hour traffic updates are not a service currently provided by most broadcast stations.

If some broadcast stations believe satellite radio is providing unbeatable competition, perhaps it should try to beat it the way it the normal way ? by providing better broadcast. This competition should make all participants better.

Please do not limit the services of satellite radio because local broadcasters do not want to try to win listeners.
